Transformative Governance

“Though the economy may be stabilizing, there is no going back to business as usual for the nonprofit sector. Going forward requires us to envision a different future for our organizations. But only those boards that are willing to transform themselves will succeed in transforming their organizations.”

Linda Crompton, CEO of BoardSource

“Transformative governance means engaging in breakthrough thinking that embraces emerging trends and developments, and asking the question, ‘What does this mean for governance?’ It means applying new ways of thinking to the principles of governance that have withstood the test of time and expanding the definition of governance to include the elements of leading an organization that is a piece of a whole rather than an end in itself.”

If you and your board are committed to a healthy future for your nonprofit, you won't want to miss Crompton's presentations and the rest of the conference.

conference comments

“...impressed with the quality of speakers.” “Extremely well organized.” “...great for networking.” “I recommend this conference as an Executive Director and as a Board Member. In addition to useful speakers and workshops, you have opportunities to network and most of all to step back and think about your organization.”
